Welcome to the 2016 Canadian Inland Ports Conference!

Across the world, Inland Ports are being developed as an integral component of the national port system.

Global trading patterns continue to evolve through the development of new and innovative strategic transportation infrastructure, such as Inland Ports, designed to create efficient and cost-effective national and international trade corridors.

With seaports growing in size and capacity, an inland port provides an extremely efficient counterbalance that connects the seaport with the inland port through a dedicated rail line and/or road network that carries containers from the ships directly to the inland port to be distributed from that location. Importantly, Inland Ports are handlers of bulk commodities both for containerization closer to the source and for the transloading in bulk to better prepare goods prior to reaching the marine terminals for export.

This Conference will ask the question as to how Western Canadian Inland Ports stack up to those established in Europe and in North and South America.

The Conference will discuss the role of airports as a strategic component of an inland port. We will hear from shippers and transportation service providers, as we develop an action plan for the future expansion of the network of Inland Ports across Canada.

Thank You to our 2016 Canadian Inland Ports Conference Sponsors!
